Capital and accumulation, $450,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business has been to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in its profits. The company is not subject to no liability or assessments beyond its premium.

The directors are required to be peculiarly interested in the company, and they give their personal attention; and the sufficient security are given by the officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

The undersigned has been duly appointed Agent of the above named companies, and is now prepared to take risks and issue policies upon all kinds of insurable property (belonging to farmers, household and furniture, grain in barns, live stock, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses other your own of the same class, and all will be paid.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected, restituted, by LETTING THEM ASIDE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to pay a single claim, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.

Capital and accumulation, $650,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudent and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business is to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments beyond his premium.

The directors are required to be peculiarly interested in the company, and they give it their personal attention; and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

The undersigned has been duly appointed Agent of the above named companies, and is now prepared to take risks and issue policies upon all kinds of insurable property at the lowest rates, and for one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses on your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stored crops, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LETTING THEM ALONE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last four years we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.

Daguerreotype Likenesses.
Either single or in groups, not to be surpassed in Wisconsin. Miniatures taken in as good style as the art can produce, having all the improved chemicals of the age, which, together with the advantages of a superior light, enable him to give a clear, bold and life-like picture.

Miniatures taken in all weathers equally well, and warranted not to fade in the least, from 75 cents to $1. Lockets and fancy cases of all styles furnished to order, and also miniatures in Pin and Bracelets.

Miniatures of sick or diseased persons taken at their residences if required.

Pictures of Children of any age correctly taken at very low rates.

His Room will be open from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M., and he invites all those that wish to see GOOD PICTURES, whether they wish likenesses or not.

Among these specimens are Miniatures of Henry Clay, John P. Hale, Jenny Lind and General Tom Thumb.

Instructions given in the art on reasonable terms.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, (belonging to farmers), household furniture, grain in barns, live stock, etc., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses only your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon dwellings, barns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by leaving them alone.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in all this moving up and down!

The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
Wave their broad curtains in the south wind's breath,
While underneath their leafy tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.

And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pave with level flags the burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law, thrown down
And broken by Moses at the mountain's base.

The very names recorded here are strange.
Of foreign accent, and of different clime;
Alvares and Rivera interchange
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.

"Blessed be God! for he created death!"
The mourners said; "and death is rest and peace."
Then added in the certainty of faith:
"And give life, that never more shall cease."

Closed are the portals of their synagogues,
No palms of David near the entrance break,
No Rabbi reads the ancient decalogue
In the grand edifice the prophets speak.

Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen
Scatters its bounty, like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.

How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea that desert, desolate,
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?

They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto or Judenstrasse, in milk and mire;
Taught in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.

And their lives long, with the unclean bread
And bitter herbs of exile and its fears,
The wasting famine of the heart they fed,
And slaked its thirst with marsh of their tears.

Anathema maranatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordcau
Was mocked, and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.

Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.

For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.

And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic words of the old Hebrew read,
Spelling it backward like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.

But ah! what once has been shall be no more!
The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

From the Belle Assemblée.
LAST TRIBUTE OF CHATEAUX-ROUX.

A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet disturbed its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was as calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair flowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, and though there was around their homes no ruder sound than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the Lord of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithe of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfilment.

This whimsical ceremony consisted in the latest re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presenting herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateaux-roux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands. The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former rightful lord, when imprisoned by an usurper, had important intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster-sister, who for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues, and in fact left the townsmen of his foster-sister to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating alike the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.

So runs the story; but, whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateaux-roux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burthen which would have weighed with paralyzing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure. Year after year this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre; but since the advent of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more disconsolate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whit-tuesday, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.

Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried widows, and of these one was the newly-made widow. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his health could bring aught sweeter than a grim smile—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassments by wedding one or the other of the widows before Whit-tuesday. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the tenth part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing, though most selfish love, had long filled the widowed heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though it had been rejected and scorned, and though the fair girl for whom it had been felt had wedded another, whose coffers were less overflowing than his own. But she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by her first husband, had become a painful and a painful one; and she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by her first husband, had become a painful and a painful one.

whose she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another. Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her.

Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed her father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow; but it did not last long; for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girl's days came again to persecute her; and though by the French laws her first marriage had been annulled, and her parents could not force her into a second, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart that beat within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart; and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Morand toiled among the women of humble fortune at the cloth factories, and while those around her oft-times murmured at her lot, a word of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her, labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.

As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street besought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within its limits.

"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned!" exclaimed Pierre Baudouin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed, for the sake of her immense fortune.

"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Soyier in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's hearth was a scene of constant strife.

"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Morand."

"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin?" suggested another, after a moment's silence.

"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.

For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the small sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the mean staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them mentally with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her, felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and entitled to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pitance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.

Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Soyier venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.

"It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he bears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Mademoiselle de Bonnet, evinced such gratitude to young Albert Rohan for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."

"Why talk of the count or his forbearance? It is with Madame Normand we have to do," cried Pierre Baudouin. "Are we to allow ourselves to be ruined, to please the idle whim of a woman who does not choose to be satisfied with our worthy friend Antoine Goudon? It needs that we discover some means of bringing her to reason."

But Lucille heard not these threats, and she retired to rest with a heart filled with gratitude to God, who had granted her the health and strength by which she was enabled to provide for her little ones, without inflicting a fresh wound upon her heart. And when she went forth the next morning to her usual occupation, for the first time since her widowhood a ray of gladness shone upon her brow. But a cloud came over that brightness, when, on entering the work-room, she was informed she could be employed there no longer. Great as was the surprise it occasioned her, she knew at once the reason of the blow that struck her, and turning away without word, sought the dwelling of Jean Fanline, one of her deceased husband's oldest friends, and asked of him employment. "He shook his head mournfully. 'I may not do it,' he said; 'it would but ensure my ruin, without saving you; for all in Chateaux-roux have sworn to have no dealings in trade or friendship with him who aids you.'"

How SCHUYLER WAS RE-ELECTED.—When the last board of directors of the New Haven railroad was elected, Schuyler was present and industriously distributed tickets with his own name at the head of the list. He had also a pocket full of proxies, procured from the holders of the seignior's stock. It was of course useless to oppose him, and he was re-elected a director and then president of the company.

Do NOT WISH TO BE A STATE.—The elections of Oregon territory have decided against holding a convention to frame a state constitution, by a majority of 520. They prefer remaining under a territorial organization for the present.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 5, 1854.

For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Janesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats. Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time, that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore falls, and the inferences fall with it. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies in this state.—Free Dem.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind. Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocoes in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration. Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those we have heretofore opposed; but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin says of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a discredit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—as least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually nearly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been assessed to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other young city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SLANDER, OR A "SAW."—One of our quondam whig friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that he had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive slave law. The motion was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. Macy with the 120 in opposition. Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANTER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the rack, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve President Pierce of the responsibility his station imposed, and now that he has vetoed the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Matthews, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

FAIR HITTING.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:

"Arising from the condition or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."

Mr. Seward asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]

Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom convenient circumstances had been of more advantage than to the senator from New York.

Mr. Knisk thought that if the brevity of that Chicago letter were followed in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.

Mr. Seward said he was aware that at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.

Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any practical good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BURGULAR CAUGHT.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwanago neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seargent and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, of that place, on Monday night last. They had traced him there by the tracks of a wheel-barrow which he had also stolen there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seargent. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but admitted that he had been traveling all night and had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the barrow track, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheel-barrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwanago, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwanago on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit" and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, plead guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German by birth, and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wis.

MCCARDLE HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tells that it is being fitted up in a style regardless of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCordle, the principal landlord of this place, is from Albany, N. Y. The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style. This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 142 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 800 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30. It is reported that Marcy on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them.

A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Borland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $24,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a nuisance, was found dead—drunk. The wages of the vicinity ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a cholera subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject revived, and perceiving his critical position he burst the lid, and landed at one bound among the mourners, a sober man. His first impulse and his first threats were to fog the crowd, but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossips ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling. "Oh carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the joke is, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed to throw away much of the paper mail after getting away to the Plate, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and in other places along the route. Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaper at Independence before starting.—Council Bluffs Bugle.

THE WET SEASON.—Messrs. Lane and Van Vechten, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

A Virginia paper states that in 20 years, $11 shaves have escaped from Wood county, valued at $18,200.

TRUDEL, JORDAN & KENNETT,
Attorneys at Law.

Having completed an accurate abstract of the TITLE, TAX and JUDGMENT RECORDS of Rock County, are prepared to furnish full and reliable information respecting the ownership of Real Estate in said county, and all liens on such estate by Judgment, Mortgage or otherwise.

They will attend to the purchase and sale of Real Estate, the negotiation of Loans, payment of Taxes, and the redemption of land from Tax Sales, and generally to all such business as properly belongs to a REAL ESTATE OFFICE.

Business in the courts of this and the adjoining counties will be promptly attended to.

New England Mutual Life Ins.,
Of Boston, Mass., Chartered in 1843,
Capital and accumulation, $850,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business has been to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessment beyond his premium.

The directors are required to be pecuniarily interested in the company, and they give it their personal attention; and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties.

Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.
THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds (belonging to farmers), household furniture, grain in barns, live stock, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently they will have no losses only from the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, and similar fire property. In this company all such property is rejected, restricting, by limiting them alone.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and profitable business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.

Sky-Light Daguerreotypes.
GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICE.

75 Cents to $5.00.

MR. J. E. POWERS, lately from Troy, (N. Y.)

has respectfully informed the Ladies and Gentlemen of this place and vicinity that he has made a permanent location in Janesville, and has taken rooms over ELLIS'S JEWELRY STORE, where he is prepared to take

Daguerreotype Likenesses,
Either singly or in groups, not to be surpassed in Wisconsin. Miniatures taken in the style as the artist can produce, having all the improved chemicals of the age, which, together with the advantages of a superior light, enable him to give a clear, bold and life-like picture.

Miniatures taken in all weathers equally well, and warranted not to fade in the least, from 75 cents to $1. Pictures taken in the style as the artist can produce.

Locketts and fancy cases of all styles furnished to order, and also miniatures in Pin and Brooches.

Miniatures of sick or diseased persons taken at their residences if required.

His Room will be open from 1 A. M. to 5 P. M., and he invites all those that wish to see W. H. A. P. T. to call and examine his Specimens, whether they wish Likenesses or not.

Among these specimens are Miniatures of Henry Clay, John P. Hale, Jenny Lind and General Tom Thumb.

Instructions given in the art on reasonable terms.
Janesville, Dec. 1, 1852.

TO BUILDERS.
Materials Furnished.

THE SUBSCRIBER is now prepared to furnish BUILDING MATERIALS in any quantity, and CHEAPER than can be sold any where else in this vicinity. Working one of the very best Quarries in the State, and possessing superior facilities for getting Out and Dressing Stone, manufacturing himself Quick Lime, and having put in perfect operation his Mill for the manufacture of Water Lime, he can offer superior inducements to builders for the purchase of these articles. His

Water Lime,
Has been fully tested, and found to be of an excellent quality, and he is now prepared to WARRANT it in all cases, and offer it at a price making it an object to buy in furnishing.

Building Stone,
It is not too much to say he is in advance of all competitors. He can furnish them in the rough, or dressed, in any quantity, or of any size, and cheaper than can be found elsewhere.

Quick Lime,
Always on hand, and orders can be filled at all times, and to any extent.

The subscriber has now invested a large amount of Capital in his operations, and has spared no expense in perfecting his works, and will give careful attention to the preparation of his materials. His location and the convenience of easy access to his Mill and Quarry, together with the superior character of his Materials, induces him to believe that he can give satisfaction to all who call upon him.

INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.—The next term of the Wisconsin institution for the education of the deaf and dumb will commence on Wednesday, September 6th. Any deaf and dumb person residing in the state, who has attained the age of ten years will be furnished with board and tuition free of expense, on being brought to the institution provided with clothes sufficient for the term of ten months. Members of the medical profession, and others acquainted with deaf mutes, are respectfully requested to subserve the cause of deaf mute education, by urging the attendance of any residing in their respective localities.

Delavan, July 20, 1854.

BRUTAL SPORT.—The San Francisco Herald gives an account of the extraordinary performance of a man named Hughes of that city, by walking 80 consecutive hours on a plank 15 feet long and 3 feet wide. The time occupied was 4 days and 3 nights, during which the sum of $500 was taken at the door for admittance. During the last hour it was necessary to whip him to keep him awake. He ate and drank very little while walking, but kept a bullet in his mouth. He averaged about 3 miles an hour, and walked 540 miles without once stopping, and was in considerable distress after completing his task; being allowed to sleep ten minutes and then kept awake the same space of time, for fear that if allowed to sleep any longer, he would never wake again. It is an instance of human endurance never before known, and we trust never to record another similar one.

A SMART BOY.—Dr. Wayland, of Brown university, had a boy six years old, who was anything but a fool. The doctor placed him under the care of one of the students, with the charge that he should not go out, without permission from his tutor.

"May I go out," at length inquired our hero. "No," was the laconic reply. A few minutes pause followed. "May I go out?" again inquired the boy. "No," was again the response. The miniature edition of the doctor slowly arose from his seat, took up his cap and pushed for the door. "Stop," said the tutor; "do you know what 'no' means?" "Yes," said Charley, "it is a particle of negation, and two of them coming together are equivalent to an affirmative."

His wit was his passport. RAILROADS NOT EDUCATORS.—A sedate old blacksmith, originally hailing from the "Key-stone state," but who had made his residence among the tabernacles of the Buckeyes, was expatriated to an auditory on the Pennsylvania anti-railroad policy, and wound up as follows: "Y-a-a-s, these railroads are bad things. In my younger days, Pennsylvanians had to travel a horse-back ten or twenty days to reach Ohio, and then they learned something on the way; now the railroads carry them in as many hours, and set them down green as when they started! Y-a-a-s, railroads are bad things!"

ABSCONDED.—Charles Dickens is reported to have run away from his London creditors, and gone to the continent of Europe—the effects of a wine bill. Dickens always lived extravagantly. During several years his income equalled $100,000, and he might have amassed nearly a million of dollars. He has also committed one of his children to Miss Burdett Coutts, an anti-qualified wealthy lady, to whom he made an appeal for money. Miss Coutts refused to comply a second time with his request, but she offered to "bring up" one of his daughters; and thus parted with one of his children, in order to obtain pecuniary relief against his own extravagance.

BRANCHES OF THE S. M. R. R.—On the Jackson branch 15 miles are now in operation; 15 more are ready for the rails, 32 miles will be complete in the fall, and the remaining 8 miles shortly thereafter. The eastern section of the Goshen, (Indiana line), 70 miles will be completed on the 1st of September, and the remainder of the line by the 1st of January next. Forty miles are now completed.

A PUZZLED JUDGE.—A man was arrested in Ohio recently for getting drunk. He pleaded that he had not been guilty of violation of the new law and claimed the right of being tried by the old law, upon the plea that he got drunk under the old law, and hadn't been sober since. The judge was puzzled and held the case over for adjournment.

STRAKER GEN. HARRISON.—This old hulk, at one time the pride of the lakes, will soon be numbered among the things that were. She lies on a bar, a short distance south of the Lake View House, where she went ashore several weeks since. Her back is broken, and she is being stripped of every thing valuable, all hopes of getting her afloat having been abandoned. —Chicago Tribune.

The Dannon monument project does not sleep, though it has not been before the public, for a month or two. The receipts in the whole have not amounted to $700 yet; but the engraving of the monument proposed is in process of execution, and when it is out, the committee will take a new start. Many copies of Dr. Arnett's memoir of the little boy have been sold, and his memory is cherished, and his life and character made subject of thought and held up as example in many families in the west.—Wia.

The colored citizens of Geneva, N. Y., have made arrangements to hold their first annual fair at Geneva, on the 4th and 5th of October, for the exhibition of stock, poultry, grain, fruit, vegetables, &c., together with all kinds of articles manufactured by colored men and women.

A state temperance convention, of four delegates from each assembly district, is to be held at Auburn, N. Y., on the 27th of September ensuing.

THE DANGERS OF SUDDEN CHANGES.—A man in Wheeling, Va., lately rendered himself a cripple for life by taking a cold bath while sweating. Paralysis immediately shrouded his left side from shoulder to foot, a deadness creeping over it which no medical aid can probably remove.

THE LARGEST & RICHEST STOCK IN CENTRAL WISCONSIN, OF CURTAIN LOOPS, BANDS, CORDS & TASSELS. Also, a new and immense supply of WINDOW SHADERS, have just arrived at COOLEY & BABCOCK'S.

LET THEM THAT THIRST COME TO SODA WATER.

WISCONSIN REPORTS, by A. D. SUTHERLAND'S BOOKSTORE.

WARREN'S DEEDS for sale at this office.

BY TELEGRAPH!

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4. SENATE.—A joint resolution was adopted. The conference committee on the post office bill reported that they could not agree to senate resolution to insist upon its amendments and a new committee of conference was appointed. The senate refused to recede from its amendment to the river and harbor bill and a conference committee on the same was appointed. The senate then took up the bill relative to ocean steam mail appropriation.

Boston, August 4. The whigs had a meeting last night and appointed delegates to the state convention which is to be held on the 15th of the present month. They oppose all fusion with other parties and factions and urged union among themselves. St. Johns, New Brunswick, papers report 27 deaths of cholera in that city during 24 hours ending 1st inst.

MADISON MUSIC STORE.

THE undersigned has in his Ware Room, in Bruen's Model Block, a good assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, and MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS generally. Some of the best manufacturers in the Union have samples of their work there. Chickering, Hallett & Davis, Lemuel Gilbert, Woodward & Brown, Loren Matis of Boston, and Hall & Son of New York, are all contributors to his stock of Pianos. Prince & Co., Bishop & Child, and S. D. & H. W. Smith's Melodeons are there also. These instruments are not found in auction rooms and other places where forced sales are made to raise money for the makers, for their reputation always commands customers on the manufacturers' own terms. They are all for sale at factory prices, and warranted satisfactory. Pianos from other manufacturers can be furnished if desired. An experienced and disinterested agent in New York selects for the subscriber any style and priced instrument desired—in whose judgment, musical skill and taste, implicit confidence can be placed. NEW MUSIC SHEET received weekly, sold at publishers' prices, and sent by mail free of postage.

Violins, Guitars, Tamborines, Danjos, Accordeons, Flutes, Fifes, Italian and other Violin Strings, Guitar and Bass Viol Strings of the best quality, Violin Bows and parts of Violins.

Bertini's, Hunter's, and other instruction books for all instruments, and many other articles in the music line, usually found in such stores, kept always on hand. Do not go further East, until you have called at the

MADISON MUSIC STORE, for, depend upon it, there is no use in it. D. HOLT.

AGAIN & AGAIN

THE BOSTON STORE.

Let the Horn be Blown!!

"Sound the loud Shofar o'er land and o'er sea," "WHEELLOCK'S triumph, and ever shall be."

THIS is the middle of the nineteenth century, the first half of which has produced more change and onward movement than any fifty years of our country's history.

The great controlling power of this age is its commerce—indeed, this may be truly called the commercial age.

It has been well said by an ancient writer that "Man wants but little here below," and to supply those wants

WHEELLOCK

Announces to every people and every tongue, to both sexes and all parties, to all factions of all gauges, that finding his old store entirely

TOO SMALL!

He has been compelled, in order to be able to supply the immense call for goods at his establishment, to Double the capacity of his Store Rooms!

Having purchased this spring, for this market, to be sold this season,

$39,000 00 Worth of Goods

But who can expect to read in the brief space of one life all the articles that the

BOSTON STORE CONTAINS.

STOCK OF SUMMER GOODS, His inimitable selection of

Fancy Dress Goods!

He has over 10,000 Yards of Silk Barges, of every style and price, and it is with no great difficulty that the fair dames of this fair valley can select, FROM THE ONE THOUSAND PIECES.

Of all patterns and ranging in price from SIX CENTS Per Yard to Twenty-Eight Cents, such dresses as will add to their exquisite beauty, though it may be a general thing, as be difficult to add to that beauty as it is "to glid refined gold, paint the fly, or add perfume to the violet."

It must not be inferred that we offer only these and the many other articles for outer apparel, such as Chamois and Foulard Silks, but all manner of

Cotton, Grass & Linen Goods are on change, so that every one may be entirely accommodated with every article of female apparel.—Ladies French red foxed Gaiters, and do what do.

Edwards' Emmeled Boots, Emmeled sewed Congress Boots,

LADIES MOROCCO POLKAS, And all the latest and most fashionable of the best styles—So that of this store, so far as articles which adorn La Belle sex are concerned, it may be truly said

"CUSTOM cannot state the infinitude variety."

While the Boston Store has made provision to protect the fact, it can also boast that it has all sorts of

GLOVES, by which hands can be protected and retain

"The white wonder of fair Juliet's hand."

And in taking leave of those of whom it is no exaggeration to say they are

"Heaven's last, best gift to man," the Nonpareils of beauty, the Paragons of perfection, Mr. Wheellock assures his fair customers that his assistants and auxiliaries are those who unite great knowledge of the business, fine personal presence and ability of manner to a determination to discharge conscientiously their several and respective duties—That while they may have the proper desire to effect sales, they will never in imitation of many of our contemporaries attempt to accomplish that object by equivocation, misrepresentation, exaggeration, tergiversation, or by any other dishonorable means.

And now to the wants of the

COARSE-HAND SEX. Mr. Wheellock has every kind of material to make those articles of dress that give to man his individuality—

PANTALOONS, CALF "BEWTS," COW HIDE DO, GAZELLE, do.

PATENT LEATHER do., GIRAFFE do.,

HATS That fit every head from the Websterian brow to the country politician's shaven crown, from the style of cap of him who is closely shorn after the Hibernian fashion to that of him who wears the well-pomaded, ambrosiated, elongated Hyperion curls.

And to the spectator who buys to sell again,

The Boston Store Can, at lower rates of usance than any other establishment west of the Alleghany mountains, furnish that class of changes to suit the pockets of the fashionable as well as the pocket of the domestic GLASSWARE, WORSTED, Pocket Handkerchiefs, Inkstands, Cotton Tarn, Ready-made Vests, Ground Pepper, Planings, Looking Glasses, Bedsteads, Green Castles, Paints, Raisins, Flat Irons and Cotton Battering, Lanterns, Satehels, which the whining school-boy with shining morning face bears on his arm.

Chests, Wardrobes, Trunks and Hair Trunks, Tobacco and Wicking.

In the

CROCKERY

Line may be found the BENNINGTON, the PARIAN and the LAVA Manufacture. Pitchers for milk or water, Ten Pots, Spoons, Bowls for washing, for bread and milk, or sugar, Canned fruit, china, or Toys and Flower Pots, MAIZE LIQUOR FLA VOLUMES and Lager Beer Mugs.

And in fine, the proprietor of this establishment can with all confidence assure those who have been in the habit of trading at Janeville that, although they have

"Often seen corruption toll and bubble till 'Tis o'errun the stew," they will find that the representations which shall be made to them by that proprietor or his clerks will not

"Stand like forfeit in a Barber shop, More in mock than mark."

From Titmum's Magazine.
BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.
How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in this moving up and down!
The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
We see their thick curtains in the south wind's breath, While underneath such leafy tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.
And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pave with level slabs their burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law; thrown down
And broken by Moses at the mountain's base.
The very names recorded here are strange—
Of foreign accent, and of different climes;
Abraham and Jacob of old times,
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.
"Blessed be God! for he created death!"
The mourners said: "And death is rest and peace."
Then added in the certainty of faith:
"And give life, that never more shall cease."
Closed are the portals of their synagogue,
No palms of David now the silence break;
No Rabbi reads the ancient dialogue
To the grand dialect of the prophet's psalm.
Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen
Scattering its bounty like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.
How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—that desert, desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?
They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto or Judenstrasse, in milk and mire;
Taught in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.
And their lives long, with the unrequited bread
And the unrequited love, and the unrequited
The waiting flame of the heart they fed,
And slaked its thirst with marsh of their tears.
Anathema maranatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordcau
Was mocked, and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.
Fride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.
For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.
And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic volume of the world they read,
Spelling its laws as like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.
But all! what once has been shall be no more!
The growing earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

LAST TRIBUTE OF CHATEAUX-ROUX.
A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet reached its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was as calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair flowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, had thought there was around their homes no ruder sound than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the Lord of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithe of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfillment.
This whimsical ceremony consisted in the latest re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presenting herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateaux-roux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands. The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former, rightful lord, who, when imprisoned by an usurper, had imported intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster-sister, who for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues, and in fact left the townsmen of his foster-sister to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating like the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.
So runs the story; but, whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateaux-roux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burthen which would have weighed with paralyzing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure. Year after year this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre; but since the snows of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more disconsolate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whit-tuesday, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.
Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried men, and of these one was the newly-made widower. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his wealth could bring aught sweeter than a grin smile—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassments by wedding one of the other of the widows before Whit-tuesday. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the tenth part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing, though most selfish love, had long filled the withered heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though it had been rejected and scorned, and though the fair girl, for whom it had been felt, had wedded another, whose offers were less overbearing than his own. But she was now a widow; she had her husband's property and her own; she had rendered her poor, and the assistance of her parents had become needless for the support of Lucille Mornand and the two happy children, who remained to remind her of the beloved husband of her youth; hint for whose sake she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another. Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her.

Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed their father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow; but it did not last long; for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girl's days came again to persecute her; and though by the French laws her first marriage had been annulled, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart that, beat within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart, and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Mornand toiled among the women of humble fortunes at the cloth factories, and while those around her off-times murmured at their lot, a word of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her, labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.
As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street brought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within its limits.
"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned," exclaimed Pierre Baudouin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed, for the sake of her immense fortune.
"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Soyer in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's hearth was a scene of constant strife.
"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Mornand."
They all looked at him aghast. It was well known to all the community how much Lucille had sacrificed rather than become his wife.
"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin," suggested another, after a moment's silence.
"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.
For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the main staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them mentally with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her, felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and entitled to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pityance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.
Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Soyer venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.
"It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he hears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Mademoiselle de Bosc, evinced such gratitude to young Albert Rohan for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."
"Why talk of the count or his forbearance? It is with Madame Mornand we have to do," cried Pierre Baudouin. "Are we to allow ourselves to be ruined, to please the idle whim of a woman who does not choose to be satisfied with our worthy friend Antoine Goudon? It needs that we discover some means of bringing her to reason."
But Lucille heard not these threats, and she retired to rest with a heart filled with gratitude to God, who had granted her the health and strength by which she was enabled to provide for her little ones, without incurring a fresh wound upon her heart. And when she went forth the next morning to her usual occupation, for the first time since her widowhood a ray of gladness shone upon her brow. But a cloud came over that brightness, when, on entering the work-room, she was informed she could be employed there no longer. Great was the surprise it occasioned her, she knew at once the reason of the blow that struck her, and turning away without word, sought the dwelling of Jean Panline, one of her deceased husband's oldest friends, and asked of him employment.
He shook his head mournfully. "I may not do it," he said; "it would be sure to ruin my ruin, without saving you; for all in Chateaux-roux have sworn to have no dealings in trade or friendship with him who aids you."
(To be concluded.)

TERRIBLE FATALITY.—Some three or four weeks since the cholera broke out among a party of 300 laborers on section 25 and 26, on the Illinois Central railroad, some twelve miles from this city, near Seely's Mound. For some time it was thought that the disease could be subdued by medical treatment; but the mortality became so fearful, that the laborers were advised by their employers to fly. The whole party left, some going one way and some another. We are now informed by Mr. McCoy, the contractor, that of 300 in his employ at the time, the disease made its attack, more than half are dead, the major part of them falling victims after they had fled. The Mound is 400 feet above the level of the Mississippi; the ground is dry, and the air pure. No locusts can be assigned for the mortality. Who can give an explanation of the causes that produced such terrible results?—Galena, Ill.

HOW SCHUYLER WAS RE-ELECTED.—When the last board of directors of the New Haven railroad was elected, Schuyler was present and industriously distributed tickets with his own name at the head of the list. He had also a pocket-full of proxies, procured from the holders of the spurious stock. It was of course useless to oppose him, and he was re-elected a director and then president of the company.

DO NOT WISH TO BE A STATE.—The electors of Oregon territory have decided against holding a convention to frame a state constitution, by a majority of 520. They prefer remaining under a territorial government for the present.

The Daily Gazette.
JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 5, 1864.
For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Janesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats. Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time, that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore falls, and the inferences fall with it. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies in this state.—Free Den.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind. Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocos in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration. Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those we have heretofore opposed; but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin says of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a discredit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually nearly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been assessed to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other young city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SCANDER, OR A "SAW."—One of our quondam wild friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that we had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive slave law. The motion was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. Macy with the 120 in opposition. Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANTER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the task, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve president Pierce of the responsibility, his station imposed, and now that he has vetoed the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Mackay, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

FAIR HITTING.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:
"Arising from the conditions or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."
Mr. Seward asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan, from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]
Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom the amendment would be more of more advantage than to the senator from New York.
Mr. Rusk thought that if the brevity of the Chicago letter were followed, in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.
Mr. Seward said he was aware that at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.
Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any precedent good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BURGESS CATWORM.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwanago neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seargent and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, of that place, on Monday night last. They had traced him thence by the tracks of a wheel-barrow which he had also stolen there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seargent. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but admitted that he had been traveling all night and had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the barrow track, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheel-barrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwanago, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwanago on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit" and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, plead guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German "by birth," and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wis.

MCCARDLE HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tell that it is being fitted up in a style regardless of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCordel, the principal landlord of this palace, is from Albany, N. Y.

The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style.

This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 142 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 800 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30.
It is reported that Marcy on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them.

A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Borland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $24,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a nuisance, was found dead—drunk! The wages of the victim ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a cholera subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject revived, and perceiving his critical position he burst the lid, and landed, at one bound among the mourners, a sober man. His first impulse and his first threats were to dog the crowd, but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossips ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling. "Oh carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the jokes, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed to throw away much of the paper mail after getting away from the stage, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and in other places along the route. Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaper at Independence before starting.—Council Bluffs Bugle.

THE WET SEASON.—Messrs. Lane and Van Veelen, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water, as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

A Virginia paper states that in 20 years 211 slaves have escaped from Wood county, valued at $181,000.

INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.—The next term of the Wisconsin Institution for the education of the deaf and dumb will commence on Wednesday, September 6th. Any deaf and dumb person residing in the state, who has attained the age of ten years will be furnished with board and tuition free of expense, on being brought to the institution provided with clothes sufficient for the term of ten months. Members of the medical profession, and others acquainted with deaf mutes, are respectfully requested to subserve the cause of deaf mute education, by urging the attendance of any residing in their respective localities.

LOUIS H. JENKINS, Principal.
Delavan, July 20, 1864.

BRUTAL SPORT.—The San Francisco Herald gives an account of the extraordinary performance of a man named Hughes in that city, by walking 80 consecutive hours on a plank 15 feet long and 3 feet wide. The time occupied was 4 days and 8 nights, during which the sum of $500 was taken at the door for admittance. During the last hour it was necessary to whip him to keep him awake. He ate and drank very little while walking, but kept a bull in his mouth. He averaged about 3 miles an hour, and walked 610 miles without once stopping, and was in considerable distress after completing his task; being allowed to sleep ten minutes, and then kept awake the same space of time, for fear that if allowed to sleep any longer, he would never wake again. It is an instance of human endurance never before known, and we trust never to record another similar one.

A SMART BOY.—Dr. Wayland, of Brown University, had a boy six years old, who was anything but a fool. The doctor placed him under the care of one of the students, with the charge that he should not go out, without permission from his tutor.

"May I go out," at length inquired our hero.

"No," was the laconic reply.

A few minutes passed followed.

"May I go out?" again enquired the boy.

"No," was again the response.

The miniature edition of the doctor slowly arose from his seat, took up his cap and pushed for the door.

"Stop," said the tutor; "do you know what 'no' means?"

"Yes," said Charley, "it is a particle of negation, and two of them coming together are equivalent to an affirmative."

His wit was his passport.

RAILROADS NOT EDUCATORS.—A sedate old blacksmith, originally hailing from the "Key-stone state," but who had made his residence among the tubercles of the Buckeyes, was expatriated to an auditory on the Pennsylvania anti-railroad policy, and wound up as follows: "Y-a-n-s, these railroads are bad things. In my younger days, Pennsylvanians had to travel a horse-back ten or twenty days to reach Ohio, and then they learned something on the way; now the railroads carry them in as many hours, and set them down green as when they started! Y-a-n-s, railroads are bad things!"

ANSWERED.—Charles Dickens is reported to have ran away from his London creditors, and gone to the continent of Europe—the effects of a wine bill. Dickens always lived extravagantly. During several years his income equaled $100,000, and he might have amassed nearly a million of dollars. He has also committed one of his children to Miss Durdett Conits, an antiquated wealthy lady, to whom he made an appeal for money. Miss Conits refused to comply a second time with his request, but she offered to "bring up" one of his daughters; and thus parted with one of his children, in order to obtain pecuniary relief against his own extravagance.

BRANCHES OF THE S. M. R. R.—On the Jackson branch 15 miles are now in operation; 15 more are ready for the rails, 32 miles will be complete. In the fall, and the remaining 8 miles shortly thereafter. The eastern section of the (Goshen, Indiana line) 70 miles will be completed on the 1st of September, and the remainder of the line by the 1st of January next. Forty miles are now completed.

A PUZZLED JUDGE.—A man was arrested in Ohio recently for getting drunk. He pleaded that he had not been guilty of violation of the law, and claimed the right of being tried by the old, upon the plea that he got drunk under the old law, and hadn't been sober since. The judge was puzzled and held the case over for adjournment.

STEAMER GEN. HARRISON.—This old hull, at one time the pride of the lakes, will soon be numbered among the things that were. She lies on a bar, a short distance south of the Lake View House, where she went ashore several weeks since. Her back is broken, and she is being stripped of every thing valuable, all hopes of getting her afloat having been abandoned. Chicago Tribune.

The Dannon monument project does not sleep, though it has not been before the public, for a month or two. The receipts in the whole have not amounted to $700 yet; but the engraving of the monument proposed is in process of execution; and when it is out, the committee will take a new start. Many copies of Dr. Arnett's memoir of the little boy have been sold, and his memory is cherished, and his life and character made subject of thought, and held up as example in many families in the west.—Wis.

The colored citizens of Geneva, N. Y., have made arrangements to hold their first annual fair at Geneva, on the 4th and 5th of October, for the exhibition of stock, poultry, grain, fruit, vegetables, &c., together with all kinds of articles manufactured by colored men and women.

A state temperance convention, of four delegates from each assembly district, is to be held at Auburn, N. Y., on the 27th of September ensuing.

[REPORTED FOR THE JANESVILLE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.

SENATE.—A joint resolution was adopted. The conference committee on the post office bill reported that they could not agree to senate resolution to insist upon its amendments and a new committee of conference was appointed. The senate refused to recede from its amendment to the river and harbor bill and a conference committee on the same was appointed. The senate then took up the bill relative to ocean steam mail appropriation.

Boston, August 4.

The whigs had a meeting last night and appointed delegates to the state convention which is to be held on the 15th of the present month. They oppose all fusion with other parties and factions and urged union among themselves.

Sales 4,100 bbls. $6.50 to $6.75 for inferior to good and choice state; $7.25 to $7.50 for Wisconsin and Ohio; $8.37 to $8.85 common to good Ohio and Michigan. Canadian scarce and nominal.

Grain market scarcely superior for wheat. Little export demand. Sales 1,500 bushels good red western $1.78. Rye, official prices lower. Sales 2,500 bushels $1.15 to $1.19. Corn market better for unsound; sound lower. Little export demand. 30,000 bushels $5.00 to $5.25 for unsound, 70 to 72 cts. for sound western mixed, 73 cts. for western yellow. Oats more plenty and lower; 43 to 45 cts. for state and western. Whiskey market scarcely superior. Sales 450 bbls. 30 to 32 cts.

MADISON MUSIC STORE.

The undersigned has in his Ware Room, in Bruen's Model Block, a good assortment of Pianos, Organs, and Musical Instruments generally. Some of the best manufacturers in the Union have samples of their work there. Chickering, Hallett & Davis, Leman, Gilbert, Woodward & Brown, Loren, Mallets of Boston, and Hall & Son of New York, are all contributors to his stock of Pianos. Prince & Co., Bishop & Child, and S. D. & H. W. Smith's Melodeons are there also. These instruments are not found in auction rooms and other places where forced sales are made to raise money for the makers, for their reputation always commands customers on the manufacturers own terms. They are all for sale at factory prices, and warranted satisfactory. Pianos from other manufacturers can be furnished if desired. An experienced and disinterested agent in New York selects for the subscriber any style and priced instrument desired—in whose judgment, musical skill and taste, imply confidence can be placed. NEW MUSIC RECEIVED weekly, sold at publishers' prices, and sent by mail free of postage.

Violins, Guitars, Tamborines, Banjos, Accordions, Flutes, Flageolets, Italian and other Violin Strings. Guitars and Bass Viol Strings of the best quality. Violin Bows and parts of Flutes.

Bertall's, Hunter's, and other instruction books for all instruments, and many other articles in the music line, usually found in such stores, kept always on hand. Do not go further East, until you have called at the Wholesale & Retail.

SIGN OF THE SAW, MAIN STREET, JANESVILLE

THE SUBSCRIBERS, in returning their thanks for the numerous patrons for past favors, and wishing to express their appreciation of the interest and support of the people of Central and Western Wisconsin, that they have now in store, and offer for sale, at the lowest cash prices, a larger and better selected stock of

Heavy and Shelf Hardware,

Bar Iron, Steel Nails,

Stoves, &c.,

than can be found in any other establishment in the interior of the State.

AMERICAN, ENGLISH REFINED & SWEDISH IRON, CAST, GERMAN, ENGLISH & AMERICAN BILLET, TOE OAK, SPRING, COIL & CAST PLOW STEEL, of all sizes.

Also to the almost endless variety of superior

Carpenter, Joiner, Cooper, Blacksmith, Wagon, and other tools, and a full assortment of House Trimmings, Chains and Clasp Pumps, Lead Pipes, Cut and Wrought Nails and Spikes, and a full assortment of Paints, Oils, and other articles, and a full assortment of

Table and Pocket Cutlery, Sharp, Scissors, Razors, &c.

Our stock of

Cook and Parlor Stoves

was never larger than at present, and comprises some forty different patterns selected with great care, (having been previously fully tested in this market,) from several of the best manufacturers in Troy and Albany. Having bought our Stoves on long time, without interest, and at a great discount, we are enabled to complete successfully with those who buy in small lots, "exclusively for cash," of which we will comply all who give us orders.

We are agents for the sale of Duray & Forsyth's celebrated Soda and Water, and a full assortment of Soda, and also for the sale of Yale's Mangle Bank, Safe and Pore Door Locks.

AGAIN & AGAIN

THE BOSTON STORE.

Let the Horn be Blown!!

"Sound the loud trumpet of our land and our sea," WHEELLOCK'S triumph, and ever shall be.

THIS is the middle of the nineteenth century, the first half of which has produced more change and onward movement than any fifty years of our Christian Era.

The great controlling power of this age is its commerce—indeed, this may be truly called the commercial age.

It has been well said by an ancient writer that "Man wants but little here below," and to supply those wants

WHEELLOCK

Announces to every people and every tongue, to both sexes and all parties, to all factions of all gauges, that finding his old store entirely

TOO SMALL!

He has been compelled, in order to be able to supply the immense call for goods at his establishment, to

BOSTON STORE CONTAINS.

STOCK OF SUMMER GOODS,

His infallible selection of

Fancy Dress Goods!

He has over

10,000 Yards of Silk Hareges, of every style and price, and it is with no great difficulty that the fair demands of this fair valley can select.

FROM THE ONE THOUSAND PIECES

Of all patterns and ranging in price from SIX CENTS Per Yard to Twenty-Eight Cents, such dresses as will suit to their exquisite beauty, though it may as well admit that it is difficult to add to that beauty, it is "to gift refined gold, paint the lily, or add perfume to the violet."

It must not be inferred that we offer only these and the many other articles for our apparel, such as Cinnamon and Foulard Silks, but all manner of

are on change, so that every one may be entirely assured that we have a full and complete stock of

French and English Dress Goods, and French and English Hat Goods, and French and English

Ladies' Emmeled Boots, Emmeled sewed Congress

And all the articles manufactured of the best styles.—So that of this store, so far as the articles which adorn the female sex are concerned, it may be truly said

"CUSTOM cannot state the infinitude variety."

While the Boston Store has made provision to protect the feet, it can also boast that it has all sorts of

by which hands can be protected and retain the Nonpareils of beauty, the Paragons of perfection, the Whimsies of fashion, the fairies of the day, the assistants and auxiliaries are those who unite great knowledge of the business, fine personal presence and affability of manner to a determination to discharge conscientiously the duties of their respective duties.

While they may have the proper desire to effect sales, they will never in imitation of many of our contemporaries attempt to accomplish that object by equivocation, misrepresentation, exaggeration, tergiversation, falsehood, or any other dishonest means.

[REPORTED FOR THE JANEVILLE GAZETTE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.
SENATE.—A joint resolution was adopted. The conference committee on the post office bill reported that they could not agree to senate resolution to insist upon its amendments and a new committee of conference was appointed. The senate refused to recede from its amendment to the river and harbor bill and a conference committee on the same was appointed. The senate then took up the bill relative to ocean steam mail appropriation.

Boston, August 4.
The whigs had a meeting last night and appointed delegates to the state convention which is to be held on the 15th of the present month. They oppose all fusion with other parties and factions and urged union among themselves.

AGAIN & AGAIN

THE BOSTON STORE.

Let the Horn be Blown!!

"Sound the loud trumpet o'er land and o'er sea,"

WHEELLOCK'S triumphant, and well known.

THIS is the middle of the nineteenth century, the first of which has produced more change and upward movement than any fifty years of our Christian Era.

The great controlling power of this age is its commerce—indeed, this may be truly called the commercial age.

It has been well said by an ancient writer that "Man wants but little here below," and to supply those wants

WHEELLOCK Announces to every people and every tongue, to both sexes and all professions, of all nations, that finding his old store entirely TOO SMALL! He has been compelled, in order to be able to supply the immense call for goods at his establishment, to Double the capacity of his Store Rooms! Having purchased this spring, for this market, to be sold this season,

$39,007 00 Worth of Goods But who can expect to read in the brief space of one life all the articles that are

BOSTON STORE CONTAINS. Indeed, history must fail to give the searcher of knowledge any accurate idea of its immense

STOCK OF SUMMER GOODS, Its inimitable selection of

Fancy Dress Goods! He has over

10,000 Yards of Silk Hareges, of every style and price, and it is with no great diffidence that the fair damsels of this valley can select, from the

ONE THOUSAND PRICES of all patterns ranging from 50c to 10c per yard. For Paris to the Pacific and Paris to the Pacific, such dresses as will add to their exquisite beauty, though it may as a general thing, be as difficult to add to that beauty as it is to give refined gold, paint the lily, or add perfume to the violet.

It must not be inferred that we offer only these and the many other articles for outer apparel, such as Chamois and Foulard Silks, but all manner of

Cotton, Grass & Linen Goods are on change, so that every one may be entirely accommodated with every article of female apparel.—Eved French red and black Hatters.

And Ladies! Emmeled Boots, Emmeled sewed Congress Boots, Ladies' Moccasin Polkas, and all the articles manufactory of the best style, so that of this store, so far as articles which adorn the female sex are concerned, it may be truly said

"CUSTOM cannot stale the infant's variety." While the Boston Store has made provision to protect the feet, it can also boast that it has all sorts of

GLOVES. "The white wonder of Paris' Juliet's hand."

And in taking leave of those of whom it is no exaggeration to say they are

"Heaven's last, best gift to man," the Nonpareils of beauty, the Paragons of perfection, Mr. Wheelock assures his fair customers that his assistants and auxiliaries are those who write great knowledge of the business, fine personal presence and ability of manner to a determination to discharge their duties with care and respect to the duties that while they may have the proper desire to effect sales, they will never in imitation of many of our contemporaries attempt to accomplish that object by equivocal, misrepresentation, exaggeration, tergiversation, or by direct lying.

And now to the wants of the

COARSE HAND SEX. Mr. Wheelock has every kind of material to make those articles of dress that give to man his individuality—

PANTALOONS, CALE, BEWITS, COW HIDE CO., GAZELLE, &c.

PATENT LEATHER CO., CHIFFRE &c.

HATS That fit every head from the Websterian brow to the country politician's, from the size of eagle's head to him who is closely shaven after the Egyptian fashion to that of him who wears the well-penned, aristocratic, straight-topped wig, and every variety in between.

And to the spectator who buys to sell again,

The Boston Store Can, at low rates of advance than any other establishment, west of the Allegheny, furnish the whole of the clothing and dress which will fill their pockets as water fills the sea. And to them we offer

DOMESTIC GLASSWARE, WOODEN, Pocket Handkerchiefs, Linens, Cottons, &c., Ready-made Clothing, and every article of the kind, looking Glass, Ready-made Over Coats, Pants, Rainsuits, and Cotton Batting, Lampers, Starches, the whole of which school-boy with shining morning-lace looks on, and every article of the kind, Tea, Tobacco and Wicings.

In the

CROCKERY Line may be found the BENNINGTON, the FAIRLAN and the LAVA Manufacture, Pitchers for milk or water, Tea Pots, Spoons, Bowls for washing, for sugar, for sugar, Champagne, children's Toys and Flower Pots, MAINE LIQUOR LAW VOLUMES and Lager Beer, &c., &c.

And in fine, the proprietor of this establishment can with all confidence assure his customers, that he has the largest and best stock of goods in the city, and that he is at the head of the trade at Janesville, that, although they have

"Often seen corruption, boll and bubble still," it is of a true and honest character.

They find that the representations which shall be made to them by that proprietor or his clerks will not stand the test of a fair trial.

Stand like fortresses in a Barber shop. Store in stock than many.

DEALERS IN

HARDWARE, Wholesale & Retail.

SIGN OF THE SAW, MAIN STREET, JANEVILLE

THE SUBSCRIBERS, in returning their thanks to their numerous patrons for past favors, and soliciting a continuance of the same, would respectfully inform the people of Central and Western Wisconsin, that they have now in stock, and are enabled to compete at lowest cash prices, a larger and better selected stock of

than can be found in any other establishment in the interior of the State.

AMERICAN, ENGLISH REFINED & SWEDISH IRON, CAST GERMAN, ENGLISH & AMERICAN BLISTER, PORTLAND CEMENT, COAL & CAST IRON STEEL, of all sizes.

Also to the almost endless variety of superior Carpenter, Joiner, Cooper, Blacksmith, Wagon-making and Farming TOOLS.

Iron Trimmings, Chains and Chains, Lead Pipes, Old and Wrought Nails and Spikes, Tin Ware, Timber's Stock, Brackets and Japanned Ware, Plaster and Plaster, Sheet Scissors, Razors, &c.

Our stock of

Cook and Parlor Stoves was never larger than at present, and comprises some forty different patterns selected with great care, (having been previously fully tested in this market), from several of the best manufacturers in Troy and Albany. Having bought our Stoves on long time, without interest, and at a great discount, we are enabled to compete successfully with those who buy in small lots, "exclusively for cash," of which we will continue all the day to give us a trial.

The Jewish Cemetery at Newport.

From Putnam's Magazine.
BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in all this moving up and down!
The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
Wave their broad curtains in the south wind's breath,
While underneath such leafy tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.
And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pave with level flags their burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law, thrown down
And broken by Moses at the mountain's base.
The very names recorded here are strange,
Of foreign accent, and of different climes;
Averes and Rivera interchange
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.
"Blessed be God! for he created death!"
The mourners said: "and death is rest and peace."
Then added in the certainty of faith:
"And giveth life, that never more shall cease."
Closed are the portals of their synagogues,
No pains of David now the shadow break,
No Rabbi reads the ancient decalogues,
In the grand dialect the prophets speak.
Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen,
Scattering its bounty like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.
How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—that desert, desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagar of mankind?
They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto or Judenstadt, in mire and mire;
Taught in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.
And their lives long, with the unquenched bread
And bitter herbs of exile and of fear,
The wasting famine of the heart they fed,
And slaked its thirst with marsh of their tears.
Anathema maranatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordcau
Was mocked, and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.
Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went,
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.
For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.
And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic volume of the world they read,
Spelling it backward like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.
But ah! what once has been shall be no more!
The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

LAST TRIBUTE OF CHATEAUX-ROUX.

A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet disturbed its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was as calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair bowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, and though there was around their homes no rude sound than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the Lord of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithe of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfillment.
This whimsical ceremony consisted in the latest re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presenting herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateaux-roux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands.
The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former rightful lord, who, when imprisoned by an usurper, had important intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster-sister, who for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues, and in fact left the townsmen of his foster-sister to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating alike the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.
So runs the story; but, whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateaux-roux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burthen which would have weighed with paralysing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure, which after years this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre; but since the snows of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more disconsolate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whit-sundae, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.
Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried men, and of these one was the newly-made widower. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his wealth could bring aught sweeter than a grin smile—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassments by wedding one of the other of the widows before Whit-sundae. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the tenth part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing thought of the fish love, had long filled the withered heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though it had been rejected and scorned, and though the fair girl for whom it had been felt had wedded another, whose coffers were less overflowing than his own. But she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by fire had rendered her poor, and the assistance of her parents had become needful for the support of Lucille Mornand and the two helpless children who remained to remind her of the beloved husband of her youth; him for whose sake she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another—Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her.

Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed their father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow; but it did not last long; for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girl's days came again to persecute her; and though by the French laws her first marriage was annulled, she, and her parents could not fires her child a second, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart, that beat within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart; and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Mornand toiled among the women of humble fortunes at the cloth factories, and while those around her oft-times murmured at their lot, a word of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her, labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.

As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street besought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within its limits.
"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned!" exclaimed Pierre Baudoin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed, for the sake of her immense fortune.
"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Seyer in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's hearth was a scene of constant strife.
"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Mornand."
They all looked at him aghast. It was well known to all the community how much Lucille had sacrificed rather than become his wife.
"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin?" suggested another, after a moment's silence.
"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.
For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the small sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the narrow staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them usually with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and anxious to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pittance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.

Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Seyer venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.
"It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he bears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Mademoiselle de Bosnet, evicted such gratitude to young Albert Robau for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."
"Why talk of the count or his forbearance?" cried Pierre Baudoin. "Are we to allow ourselves to be ruined, to please the idle whim of a woman who does not choose to be satisfied with our worthy friend Antoine Goudon? It needs that we discover some means of bringing her to reason."
But Lucille heard not these threats, and she retired to rest with a heart filled with gratitude to God, who had granted her the health and strength by which she was enabled to provide for her little ones, without inflicting a fresh wound upon her heart. And when she went forth the next morning to her usual occupation, for the first time since her widowhood a ray of gladness shone upon her brow. But cloud came over that brightness, when on entering the work-room, she was informed she was employed there no longer. Great was the surprise it occasioned her, she knew at once the reason of the blow that struck her, and turning away without word, sought the dwelling of Jean Pauline, one of her deceased husband's oldest friends, and asked of him employment.
"He took his life too soon," said Pauline. "I may not do it," he said. "It would but ensure my ruin, without saving you; for all in Chateaux-roux have sworn to have no dealings in trade or friendship with him who aids you!"

TERRIBLE FATALITY.—Some three or four weeks since, the cholera broke out among a party of 800 laborers on section 25 and 26, on the Illinois Central railroad, some twelve miles from this city, near Scales' Mound. For a time, it was thought that the disease could be subdued by medical treatment; but the mortality became so fearful that the laborers were advised by their employers to fly. The whole party left, some going one way and some another. We are now informed by Mr. McCoy, the contractor, that of 300 in his employ at the time the disease made its attack, more than half are dead, the major part of them falling victims after they had fled. Scales' Mound is 450 feet above the level of the Mississippi; the ground is dry, and the air pure. No local cause can be assigned for the mortality. Who can give an explanation of the causes that produced such terrible results?—Galesia Jcf.
HOW SCHUYLER WAS RE-ELECTED.—When the last board of directors of the New Haven railroad was elected, Schuyler was present and industriously distributed tickets with his own name at the head of the list. He had also a pocket full of proxies, procured from the holders of the spurious stock. It was of course useless to oppose him, and he was re-elected a director and then president of the company.

Do not wish to be a state.—The electors of Oregon territory have decided against holding a convention to frame a state constitution, by a majority of 520. They prefer remaining under a territorial organization for the present.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 5, 1854.

For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Janesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats. Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time, that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore fails, and the inferences fall with it.—We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies in this state.—Free Dem.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind. Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocos in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration. Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those we have heretofore opposed; but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin says of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a dis-spirit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—as least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually nearly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been assigned to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other rising city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SLANDER, OR A "SAV."—One of our quondam whig friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that we had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive slave law. The motion was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. May with the 120 in opposition. Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANNER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the rack, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve president Pierce of the responsibility his station imposed, and now that his has vetoed the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Matthews, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

FAIR HITTING.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:

"Arising from the condition or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."

Mr. Seward asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]

Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom convenient circumstances had been of more advantage than to the senator from New York.

Mr. Rusk thought that if the brevity of that Chicago letter were followed in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.

Mr. Seward said he was aware that, at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.

Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any practical good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BUNGLER CATCHES.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwago neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seagrunt and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, of that place, on Monday night last. They had traced him there by the tracks of a wheel-barrow which he had also stolen, there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seagrunt. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the wheel-barrow, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheel-barrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwago, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwago on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit" and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, plead guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German by birth, and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wis.

MCCARDLE HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tell that it is being fitted up in a style of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCordle, the principal landlord of this place, is from Albany, N. Y. The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style.
This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 142 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 200 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30.
It is reported that Marcy on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them.
A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Borland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $24,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a nuisance, was found dead—drunk. The wages of the vicinity ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a colored subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject perceived a sober man. His first impulse and his first threats were to fog the crowd; but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossips ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling. "Oh carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the joke is, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed to throw away much of the paper mail after getting away from the Plate, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and to other places along the route. Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaply. Independence before starting.—Council Bluffs Eagle.

THE WET SEASON.—Messrs. Lane and Van Wechten, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

A Virginia paper states that in 20 years, 211 slaves have escaped from Wood county, valued at $181,200.

Capital and accumulation, $650,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business has been to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments but his premium.

The directors are required to be peculiarly interested in the company, and they give their personal attention; and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties.

Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.

THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE
COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine, and all kinds of barns, live stock, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We are anxious to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less in danger than any other, consequently you will have no losses only your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LET-
TING THEM ALONE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years,
and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.

Highly Important to Farmers.

THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE
COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon
Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine, and all kinds of barns, live stock, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof
is made thereon.

We are anxious to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less in danger than any other, consequently you will have no losses only your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LET-
TING THEM ALONE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years,
and we have not been obliged to assess our premium
notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in all this moving up and down!

The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
Wave their benighted branches in the wind's breath,
While underneath such lofty tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.

And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pave with level flags their burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law, thrown down
And broken by losses at the mountain's base.

The very names recorded here are strange,
Of foreign accent, and of different climes;
Alvares and Rivera interchange
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.

"Blessed be God! for he created death,"
The mourners said: "and death is rest and peace."
Then added to the choir of funeral dirges,
"And give us life, that may be more than cease."

Closed are the portals of their synagogue,
Not a sound of prayer or psalm is heard,
No Rabbi reads the ancient decalogue
In the grand edifice the prophets speak.

Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen,
Scattering its bounty, like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.

How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—this desert, desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?

They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto or Judenstadt, in milk and mire;
Thought in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.

And their lives long, with the unquenched bread
Of suffering, and the unquenched tears,
The wasting famine of the heart they fed,
And slaked its thirst with marsh of their tears.

Anathema maranatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordcau
Was mocked, and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.

Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.

For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.

And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic world of the world they read,
Spelling it backward like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.

But ah! what once has been shall be no more!
The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

LAST TRIBUTE OF CHATEAUX-ROUX.

A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet disturbed its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was its calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair flowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, and though there was around their homes no rude sound than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the lords of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithe of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfilment.

This whimsical ceremony consisted in the latest re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presenting herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateaux-roux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands. The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former faithful lord, who, when imprisoned by an usurper, had important intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster-sister, who for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues; and in fact left the townsmen of his foster-father to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating all the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.

So runs the story; but whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateaux-roux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burden which would have weighed with paralyzing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure. Year after year this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre; but since the snows of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more disconsolate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whit-tuesday, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.

Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried men; and of these one was the newly-made widower. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his wealth could bring aught sweeter than a grin smelt—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassments by wedding one or the other of the widows before Whit-tuesday. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the tenth part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing, though most selfish love, had long filled the withered heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though it had been rejected and scorned, and though the fair girl for whom it had been felt had wedded another, whose coffers were less overladen than his own. But she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by her had rendered her poor, and the assistance of her parents had become needful for the support of Lucille Mornand and the two helpless children, who remained to remind her of the beloved husband of her youth; him for whose sake she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another. Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her.

Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed her father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow; but it did not last long for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girlish days came again to persecute her; and though by the French laws her first marriage had enfranchised her, and her parents could not force her into a second, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart that, bent within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart; and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Mornand toiled among the women of humble fortunes at the cloth factories, and while those around her oft-times murmured at their lot, a world of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her, labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.

As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street besought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within its limits.

"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned!" exclaimed Pierre Baudouin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed, for the sake of her immense fortune.

"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Soyer in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's health was a scene of constant strife.

"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Mornand."

They all looked at him aghast. It was well known to all the community how much Lucille had ennobled rather than become his wife.

"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin?" suggested another, after a moment's silence.

"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.

For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the small sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the mean staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them mentally with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her, felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and entitled to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pitance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.

Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Soyer venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.

It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he bears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Mademoiselle de Bonaet, evincing such gratitude to young Albert Rohan for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 6, 1864.

For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Janesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats. Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time, that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore falls, and the inference falls with it. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies in this state.—Free Press.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind. Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocos in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration. Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those who have heretofore opposed; but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin says of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a discredit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—as least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually neatly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been asserted to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other young city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SLANDER, OR A "SAW."—One of our quondam high friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that we had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive slave law. "The motion" was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. May with the 120 in opposition. Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANTER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the rack, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve President Pierce of the responsibility, his station imposed, and now that he has "voted the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Matthews, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

Fair HIRING.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:

"Arising from the condition or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."

Mr. Sevard asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan, from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]

Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom convenient circumstances had been of more advantage than to the senator from New York.

Mr. Rusk thought that if the brevity of that Chicago letter were followed in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.

Mr. Sevard said he was aware that, at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.

Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any practical good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BURNING OF A CAR.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwango neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seargent and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, of that place, on Monday night last. They had traced him there by the tracks of a wheel-barrow which he had also stolen there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seargent. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but admitted that he had been traveling all night and had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the barrow track, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheel-barrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwango, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwango on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit," and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, pleaded guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German by birth, and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wf.

MCCABE'S HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tells that it is being fitted up in a style of regularity of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCabed, the principal landlord of this place, is from Albany, N. Y. The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style.

This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 112 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 200 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are, very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30. It is reported that Marey on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them.

A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Borland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $21,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a nuisance, was found dead—drunk. The wages of the janitor ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a cholera subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject revived, and perceiving his critical position he burst the lid, and landed at one bound among the mourners, a sober man. His first impulse and his first threats were to flog the crowd, but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossips ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling. "Oh, carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the jokes, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed "to throw away" much of the paper mail after getting away to the Platte, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and in other places along the route. Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaper at Independence before starting.—Council Bluffs Bugle.

THE YET SEASON.—Messrs. Lane and Van Vechten, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in all this moving up and down!

The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
Wave their benighted branches in the wind's breath,
While underneath such lofty tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.

And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pave with level flags their burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law, thrown down
And broken by losses at the mountain's base.

The very names recorded here are strange,
Of foreign accent, and of different climes;
Alvares and Rivera interchange
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.

"Blessed be God! for he created death,"
The mourners said: "and death is rest and peace."
Then added to the choir of funeral dirges,
"And give us life, that may be more than cease."

Closed are the portals of their synagogue,
No sound of music heard from the south wind's breath;
No Rabbi reads the ancient decalogue
In the grand edifice the prophets spoke.

Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen,
Scattering its bounty, like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.

How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—this desert, desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?

They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto or Judenstadt, in milk and mire;
Thought in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.

And their lives long, with the unquenched bread
Of persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—this desert, desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?

Anathema maranatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordcau
Was mocked, and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.

Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.

For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.

And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic world of the world they read,
Spelling it backward like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.

But ah! what once has been shall be no more!
The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

LAST TRIBUTE OF CHATEAUX-ROUX.

A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet disturbed its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair flowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, and though there was around their homes no rudeness than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the lord of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithing of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfilment.

This whimsical ceremony consisted in the late-re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presented herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateauxroux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands.—
The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former faithful lord, who,
when imprisoned by an usurper, had imparted intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster-sister, who for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues; and in fact left the townsmen of his foster-sister to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating all the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.

So runs the story; but whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateauxroux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burthen which would have weighed with paralysing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure.—
Year after year this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre;
but since the snows of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more discon-solate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whitsunday, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.

Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried men; and of these one was the newly-made widower. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his wealth could bring aught sweeter than a grim smile—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassment by wedding one or the other of the widows before Whitsunday. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the tenth part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing, though most selfish love, had long filled the withered heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though it had been rejected and scorned, and though the fair girl for whom it had been kindled had wedded another, whose coffers were less overlaid than his own. But she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by her had rendered her poor, and the assistance of her parents had become needful for the support of Lucille Mornand and the two helpless children, who remained to remind her of the beloved husband of her youth; him for whose sake she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another.

Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her.

Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed her father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow;
but it did not last long for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girlhood days came again to persecute her; and though by the French laws her first marriage had enfranchised her, and her parents could not force her into a second, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart that, bent within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart; and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Mornand toiled among the women of humble fortunes at the cloth factories, and while those around her oft-times murmured at their lot, a world of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.

As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street besought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within its limits.

"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned!" exclaimed Pierre Baudouin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed,
for the sake of her immense fortune.

"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Soyer in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's health was a scene of constant stife.

"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Mornaud."

They all looked at him aghast. It was well known to all the community how much Lucille had ennobled rather than become his wife.

"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin?" suggested another, after a moment's silence.

"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.

For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the small sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the mean staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them mentally with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her, felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and entitled to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pitance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.

Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Soyer venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.

"It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he bears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Mademoiselle de Bonaet, evincing such gratitude to young Albert Rohan for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."

"Why talk of the count or his forbearance?"
cried Pierre Baudouin. "Are we to allow ourselves to be ruined, to please the idle whim of a woman who does not choose to be satisfied with our worthy friend Antoine Goudon? It needs that we discover some means of bringing her to reason."

But Lucille heard not these threats, and she retired to rest with a heart filled with gratitude to God, who had granted her the health and strength by which she was enabled to provide for her little ones, without incurring a fresh wound upon her heart. And when she went forth the next morning to her usual occupation, for the first time since her widowhood a ray of gladness shone upon her brow. But a cloud came over that brightness, when, on entering the work-room, she was informed she could be employed there no longer. Great, as was the surprise it occasioned her, she knew at once the reason of the blow that struck her, and turning away without word, sought the dwelling of Jean Pauline, one of her deceased husband's oldest friends, and asked of him employment.—
He shook his head mournfully. "I may not do it," he said; "it would but ensure my ruin, without saving you; for all in Chateaux-roux have sworn to have no dealings in trade or friendship with him who aids you."

TERRIBLE FATALITY.—Some three or four weeks since, the cholera broke out among a party of 300 laborers on section 25 and 26, on the Illinois Central railroad, some twelve miles from this city, near Scates' Mount. For a time, it was thought that the disease could be subdued by medical treatment; but the mortality became so fatal, that the laborers were advised by their employers to fly. The whole party left, some going one way and some another. We are now informed by Mr. McCoy, the contractor, that of 300 in his employ at the time the disease made its attack, more than half are dead, the major part of them falling victims after they had fled.
Scates' Mount is 450 feet above the level of the Mississippi; the ground is dry, and the air pure.
No local cause can be assigned for the mortality.
Who can give an explanation of the causes that produced such terrible results?—Galeata, Ill.

HOW SCHUYLER WAS RE-ELECTED.—When the last board of directors of the New Haven railroad was elected, Schuyler was present and industriously distributed tickets with his own name at the head of the list. He had also a pocket full of proxies, procured from the holders of the "spurious stock." It was of course useless to oppose him, and he was re-elected a director and then president of the company.

DO NOT WISH TO BE A STATE.—The electors of Oregon territory have decided against holding a convention to frame a state constitution, by a majority of 620. They prefer remaining under a territorial organization for the present.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 6, 1864.

For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Janesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats.
Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore falls, and the inference falls with it.
We hope there will be no attempt to create jeal-ousies in this state.—Free Democrat.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind.
Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocos in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration.
Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those who have heretofore opposed;
but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin says of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a discredit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—as least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually neatly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been asserted to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other young city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SLANDER, OR A "SAW."—One of our quandary friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that we had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive slave law. "The motion" was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. May with the 120 in opposition.
Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANTER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the rack, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve President Pierce of the responsibility his station imposed, and now that he has "voted the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Matthews, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

Fair HIRSH.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:

"Arising from the condition or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."

Mr. Sevard asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan, from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]

Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom convenient circumstances had been of more advantage than to the senator from New York.
Mr. Rusk thought that if the brevity of that Chicago letter were followed in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.

Mr. Sevard said he was aware that, at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.

Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any practical good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BURNING OF A CAR.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwango neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seargent and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, of that place, on Monday night last. They had traced him there by the tracks of a wheelbarrow which he had also stolen there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seargent. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but admitted that he had been traveling all night and had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the barrow track, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheelbarrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwango, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwango on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit," and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, pleaded guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German, by birth, and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wf.

MCCABE'S HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tells that it is being fitted up in a style regardless of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCabed, the principal landlord of this place, is from Albany, N. Y.

The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style.

This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 112 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 200 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are, very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30.

It is reported that Marey on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them.

A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Holland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $21,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a nuisance, was found dead—drunk. The wages of the janitor ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a cholera subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject revived, and perceiving his critical position he burst the lid, and landed at one bound among the mourners, a sober man.
His first impulse and his first threats were to flog the crowd, but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossip ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling.
"Oh, carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the jokes, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed "to throw away" much of the paper mail after getting away to the Platte, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and in other places along the route: Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaper at Independence before starting.
—Council Bluffs Eagle.

THE YET SEASON.—Messrs. Lane and Van Vechlin, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

A Virginia paper states that in 20 years, 211 slaves have escaped from Wood county, valued at $181,200.

From Putnam's Magazine.

BY HENRY W. LUSK.

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,
Close by the street of this fair sea-port town;
Silent beside the never-silent waves,
At rest in all this moving up and down!

The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep
Wave their broad curtains in the south wind's breath,
While underneath such leafy tents they keep
The long mysterious Exodus of death.

And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,
That pry with Jewish eyes their burial place,
Are like the tablets of the law, thrown down
And broken by Moses at the mountain's base.

The very names recorded here are strange,
Of foreign accent, and of different clime;
Alvares and Rivera interchange
With Abraham and Jacob of old times.

"Blessed be God! for he created death!"
The mourners said: "and death is rest and peace."
Then added in the certainty of faith:
"And giveth life, that never more shall cease."

Closed are the portals of their synagogue,
No psalms of David now their silence break,
No Rabbi reads the ancient decalogue
In the grand dialect the prophets speak.

Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
And not neglected, for a hand unseen,
Scattering its bounty, like a summer rain,
Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.

How came they here? What burst of Christian hate,
What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—that desert, desolate,
These Ishmaels and Hagars of mankind?

They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Thence to Judaea's dark and drear night;
Taught in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.

And their lives long, with the unweaned bread
And bitter herbs of exile and its fears,
The wasting famine of the heart they fed,
And slaked its thirst with marsh of their tears.

Anathema marmatha! was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed shroud was laid,
We wretched and accursed, and spurned by Christian feet.

Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them thro' the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.

For in the background figures vague and vast,
Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the past
They saw reflected in the coming time.

And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic volume of the world they read,
Spelling it backward like a Hebrew book,
Till life became a legend of the dead.

But ah! what once has been shall be no more!
The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
And the dead nations never rise again.

LAST TRIBUTE TO CHATEAUX-ROUX.

A TALE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

It was the spring of 1793, but the revolution which was then convulsing the greater part of France had not yet disturbed its geographical centre, and the department of the Indre was as calm and peaceful as though death and desolation were not stalking triumphant through the streets of Paris. But though the fair flowers looked up unscathed to the blue sky, and though there was around their homes no ruder sound than the sighing of the spring wind, the inhabitants of the town of Chateaux-roux were ill at ease; brows were heavily clouded in the large and wealthy street of the Indre, where dwelt the manufacturers of cloth; for with each opening blossom, with each warmer ray of sunshine, drew near the day when they must pay to the Lord of Chateaux-roux, as lord of the manor, a tithe of all that they possessed, unless it should be redeemed according to custom by the performance of a strange ceremony, which, during more than three centuries, had preserved alike the remembrance and recognition of the lord's right, and of the vassal's claim to its remission, on terms which might have seemed ridiculous to both, but for the immense importance attached to their fulfilment.

This whimsical ceremony consisted in the latest re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre presenting herself on Whit-Tuesday before the gate of the castle of Chateaux-roux, bearing upon her head a vase of roses, which the lord of Chateaux-roux should break, and thus free her townsmen from the heavy tax they were otherwise bound to pay for having built on the count's lands. The origin of this custom is wrapped in the uncertainty which usually surrounds such relics of by-gone days; but there is a plausible version, which ascribes it to a former rightful lord, who, when imprisoned by an usurper, had important intelligence—leading to his escape and restoration to his estate—conveyed to him in a vase of roses by a young widow, his foster sister, for his sake, had again wedded one high in the usurper's confidence. In consequence, it is said, the count remitted the payment of his heavy dues, and in fact left the townsmen of his foster sister to hold their land free, on the tenure of performance of this ceremony, perpetuating alike the remembrance of her devotion and his gratitude.

So runs the story; but, whether true or false, was little heeded by the inhabitants of Chateaux-roux, who had waxed rich from their freedom from taxation. All they saw in the ancient custom, was the means of relieving them from a burthen which would have weighed with paralyzing effect on their exertions; and all they cared for was the due observance of the tenure. Year after year this service had been performed by the only re-married widow of the Rue de l'Indre; but since the snows of winter had melted from the old churchyard she had been laid in it, and the bereaved husband was scarce more disconsolate than his brother manufacturers. How they were to find a substitute before the Whit-tuesday, from which but a few weeks separated them, was the subject that occupied every thought and every tongue.

Throughout the whole extent of the prescribed street, though there were many widows, there were but two unmarried men, and of these one was the newly-made widower. Thus the hopes of the community rested on Antoine Goudon—a thin, wiry-looking man, whose youth had fled, and on whose countenance not even the thought of his wealth could bring aught sweeter than a grin smile;—and earnestly and warmly his friends urged him to relieve them of his embarrassments by wedding one of the other of the widows before Whit-tuesday. Goudon, however, shook his head, and turned a deaf ear to all their entreaties, though they added weight to them by offering to bestow a rich dowry on whichever his choice might fall. But in his secret soul Antoine Goudon rejoiced over the fears and tribulations of his fellow-townsmen, notwithstanding they threatened himself with the loss of the south part of his possessions. A deep and absorbing, though most selfish love, had long filled the withered heart of the wealthy manufacturer, though the fair girl for whom it had been kindled had wedded another, whose coffers were less overladen than his own. But she was now a widow; the loss of her husband's property and her own by fire had rendered her poor, and the assistance of her parents had become needful for the support of Lucille Mornand and the two helpless children who remained to remind her of the beloved husband of her youth; him for whose sake she had exerted to the uttermost her influence over her parents, and won them to consent to her union with one whose fortunes were scarce equal to her own, but with whom her life had been so blessed, until the luckless hour that saw him depart for Paris, where his affairs drew him, and where he had fallen the victim of assassination intended for another. Grief and poverty, like evil spirits, fell upon the young wife, and almost crushed her. Yet the mother's heart held her up; she must strive not to leave her little ones alone in the world, but bestow the love and duty she had owed their father. The affection of her parents was a great consolation to the youthful widow; but it did not last long; for the man's presence who had cast a shadow over her girl's days came again to persecute her; and though by the French law her first marriage had been annulled, her parents could not force her into a second, yet they withdrew all assistance from her, in the hope that poverty would prevail where they had failed. But they little knew the noble heart that beat within that fragile frame, and bade her look on labor as a light misfortune, compared to giving her hand without her heart; and from morning to night the delicately nurtured Lucille Mornand toiled among the women of humble fortunes at the cloth factories, and while those around her oft-times murmured at their lot, a world of complaint never crossed her lips. She felt that, to her, labor was a blessing, for it saved her from the fate she dreaded.

As time passed on, the anxiety of the good people of Chateaux-roux approached its climax; every day the whole town looked more earnestly towards the Rue de l'Indre for deliverance, and every day the dwellers in that wealthy street besought Antoine Goudon that he would espouse one of the widows within his limits.

"A man should never think of himself when the interests of his country are concerned!" exclaimed Pierre Baudouin, the richest of them all, who had married a woman pitifully deformed, for the sake of her immense fortune.

"Depend upon it, there is no happiness equal to that of being married," remarked Jules Soyser in a low, confidential voice, to Goudon, who knew as well as most present, that the wealthy manufacturer's hearth was a scene of constant strife.

"I am by no means convinced of that," observed Goudon, shaking his head. "Nevertheless, for the good of Chateaux-roux, I will not object to marrying the widow of Claude Mornand."

They all looked at him aghast. It was well known to all the community how much Lucille had sacrificed rather than become his wife.

"Or the widow of Andre St. Martin?" suggested another, after a moment's silence.

"No, no other," replied Goudon, in a determined tone.

For a while longer they strove to shake his resolution; but finding the rich man unchangeable, they determined to go in a body to the poor work-woman, whose happiness was buried in the grave of the husband, and demand of her the small sacrifice of her peace, that their gold might remain intact. As they mounted the mean staircase, and looked round on the humble rooms they contrasted them mentally with their own sumptuous homes, and overlooking the cause which had thus reduced her, felt themselves immeasurably the superiors of the gentle tenant, and entitled to legislate for her. But the poor widow listened to their offers of wealth for herself and children in silence, though her father was among them, with promises of the love and protection he should have given without conditions. To her whose sole wealth was the pittance earned by her daily labor, the rights of the lord of Chateaux-roux had no terrors; and so she told the men trembling for their thousands.

Great was the indignation of the rich merchants and manufacturers of the Indre-street, as they sat in gloomy council in the house of Jules Soyser venting in bitter words their wrath at the perverseness of the feeble woman who had thus thwarted them, and debating what could be done in such an emergency.

"It is no use hoping the count will forego his claim, or accept of any composition for the due," observed their host. "They say he hears but little love to the burghers of Chateaux-roux, since that his cousin, Madame de la Bousie, evinced such gratitude to young Albert Rolan for saving her life when the mad bull attacked her."

"Why talk of the count or his forbearance? It is with Madame Normand we have to do," cried Pierre Baudouin. "Are we to allow ourselves to be ruined, to please the idle whim of a woman who does not choose to be satisfied with our worthy friend Antoine Goudon? It needs that we discover some means of bringing her to reason."

But Lucille heard not these threats, and she retired to rest with a heart filled with gratitude to God, who had granted her the health and strength by which she was enabled to provide for her little ones, without inflicting a fresh wound upon her heart. And when she went forth the next morning to her usual occupation, for the first time since her widowhood a ray of gladness shone upon her brow. But a cloud came over that brightness, when, on entering the work-room, she was informed she could be employed there no longer. Great as was the surprise it occasioned her, she knew at once the reason of the blow that struck her, and turning away without word, sought the dwelling of Jean Panliffe, one of her deceased husband's oldest friends, and asked of him employment. "He shook his head mournfully. 'I may not do it,' he said; 'it would but ensure my ruin, without saving you; for all in Chateaux-roux have sworn to have no dealings in trade or friendship with him who aids you.'"

TERRIBLE FATALITY.—Some three or four weeks since, the cholera broke out among a party of 300 laborers on section 25 and 26, on the Illinois Central railroad, some twelve miles from this city, near Seneca's Mount. For a time, it was thought that the disease could be subdued by medical treatment; but the mortality became so fearful that the laborers were advised by their employers to fly. The whole party left, some going one way and some another. We are now informed by Mr. McCoy, the contractor, that of 300 in his employ at the time the disease made its attack, more than half are dead, the major part of them falling victims after they had fled. Seneca's Mount is 450 feet above the level of the Mississippi; the ground is dry, and the air pure. No local cause can be assigned for the mortality. Who can give an explanation of the causes that produced such terrible results?—Galena Jf.

HOW SCHUYLER WAS RE-ELECTED.—When the last board of directors of the New Haven railroad was elected, Schuyler was present and industriously distributed tickets with his own name at the head of the list. He had also a pocket full of proxies, procured from the holders of the spurious stock. It was of course useless to oppose him, and he was re-elected a director and then president of the company.

DO NOT WISH TO BE A STATE.—The electors of Oregon territory have decided against holding a convention to frame a state constitution, by a majority of 620. They prefer remaining under a territorial organization for the present.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUG. 5, 1854.

For telegraphic news see third page.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Yesterday was the day designated for the adjournment of congress; but our telegraphic report leaves it in session, and nothing is said as to whether the resolution to adjourn had been reconsidered, or an adjournment would be had at the time specified.

VETO OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.—The Sentinel of yesterday states that it had a despatch from Washington which asserted it was certain that President Pierce would veto the river and harbor bill. Our telegraphic despatch, which left Washington yesterday noon, leaves the bill in the hands of a committee of conference, without stating whether the two houses had come to an agreement upon it.

The Jamesville Gazette is mistaken in regard to the convention which nominated Mr. Walton in Vermont. It was not a free soil convention, but like the convention we had in Madison, was composed of whigs, free soilers and democrats. Judge Royce was rejected by the whig portion of the convention, on the ground that his answer on temperance was not satisfactory. The N. Y. Tribune expressed the opinion at the time, that Judge Royce would explain himself satisfactorily, and that Mr. Walton would decline, which has been done. The Gazette's statement therefore falls, and the inferences fall with it. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies in this state.—Free Dem.

We give the correction, or explanation, of the Free Democrat, with the remark that it is the first time we have seen anything of the kind. Every report of the convention which nominated Mr. Walton, or allusion to it, has styled it a free soil assemblage, and our comments upon it were based upon the belief that it was so. If we mistake not, it not only nominated a candidate for governor against Judge Royce, but named a full ticket against other whig candidates. We hope there will be no attempt to create jealousies either in Vermont or Wisconsin, and one of the most effectual means of avoiding them will be for free soilers to refrain from coalitions with the locofocos in states where there is a whig ascendancy for the purpose of breaking it down, and thereby give the vote of the state to Gen. Pierce's slavery administration. Is not this apparent? We have abandoned for the present a distinctive whig organization in this state, under a firm conviction of its necessity, and gone reluctantly, as all know, into "a union" with those we have heretofore opposed; but we have done so deliberately, and with a determination to act fairly and honestly. If difficulties hereafter arise, we do not mean to be the aggressor.

WELL SAID.—The Wisconsin rays of the Chicago daily papers, they "are a discredit to their city for the manner in which they are printed—as least those which reach us. We never saw such blurred up specimens of the art preservative of all arts." The same remark will apply to those which reach us. The Journal we seldom open, as it is usually nearly or quite unintelligible; the Tribune until recently was scarcely better, and though its reading matter has been improved somewhat by the use of new type, its advertisements are yet a disgrace to printing ink. Young America, since the administration has been assessed to give it a larger size and new type, is tolerably passable, but with its material ought to be a good deal better printed than it is. The Democratic Press we do not receive, but judging from a few numbers we have seen, are inclined to think its typography better than any of its contemporaries. Whatever else Chicago may have to boast of, (and she has as many notable things as any other young city,) she can claim little credit for the appearance of her daily newspapers.

A SLANDER, OR A "SAW."—One of our quondam whig friends, who went off into the Van Buren movement in 1848, accosted us the other day, and observed that he had heard that we had come out in favor of the Nebraska bill. We were surprised, of course, and asked him if he had got his news from our paper; no, he had been too conscientious a free soiler to take, or even read it, but hinted that it was our "private opinion, publicly expressed." The question is, who has been slandering us, or trying to "run a saw" upon our unsophisticated friend?

REPEAL OF THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—On Friday last, Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, moved a suspension of the rules of the house of representatives to allow him to introduce a bill to repeal the fugitive-slave law. The motion was lost by a vote of 45 to 120, the 45 being generally whigs and the 120 democrats. Mr. Eastman and Mr. Wells voted with the 45 to suspend, and Mr. May with the 120 in opposition. Whether from policy or principle, Mr. Eastman is certainly putting his votes in the right direction.

THE ADMINISTRATION BANTER.—The administration scheme to transfer the veto power from the president, in whom it is vested by the constitution, to the secretary of war, in the case of the river and harbor bill, has been signally defeated in the senate. The amendment was finally rejected by a vote of 35 to 14. So the president will have to stand up to the rack, and take the responsibility of approving or defeating the bill.—Buff. Com. Adv.

No decent man will regret the defeat of the attempt to relieve President Pierce of the responsibility his station imposed, and now that he has vetoed the bill, he will lose all the respect that might have been awarded to an open, manly accomplishment of his purposes. Somehow the present administration seems determined not only to render itself obnoxious but despicable.

Charles Matthews, the actor, has obtained a certificate of bankruptcy in London. His failure is attributed to his visit to this country.

FAIR HITTING.—During the recent debate in the United States senate on the river and harbor bill, Mr. Chase offered as an amendment, to insert somewhere the following words:

"Arising from the condition or circumstances attending the construction or plan of any particular work."

Mr. Seward asked if the senator had fully satisfied himself as to what circumstances his amendment would sanction as sufficient cause for suspending the work? Would the same circumstances which prevented the senator from Michigan from going to Chicago a few years ago be sufficient?—[Laughter.]

Mr. Cass said he knew no gentleman to whom convenient circumstances had been of more advantage than to the senator from New York.

Mr. Rusk thought that if the brevity of that Chicago letter were followed in speeches in the senate, it would be most profitable.

Mr. Seward said he was aware that, at the time of putting his question, there was much noise and confusion in the chamber, but he was glad it had attracted the senator's notice.

Mr. Cass said that some years ago the whig party got up a scheme called the Chicago convention. He had never seen a man who believed it had produced any practical good, and he believed at the time it would not. He said that circumstances did not render it convenient for him to attend. That was the history of the whole matter.—[Laughter.]

BRANDY CATCH.—On Wednesday morning early, the good people of Waukesha were visited by three or four of their Mukwango neighbors in pursuit of a burglar who had broken open the store of Mr. Seargent and a shoe shop of Mr. Devitt, that of place, on Monday night last. They had traced him there by the tracks of a wheel-barrow which he had also stolen there to wheel of his plunder in.

A suspicious looking man was found there at the hotel, and arrested on suspicion. Upon examination, a watch was found in his pocket belonging to Mr. Seargent. He still denied knowing anything of the stolen goods or wheel-barrow, but admitted that he had been traveling all night and had only slept a short time that morning. He finally went with them to show where he had slept, and after going a short distance they again saw the barrow track, and followed it to a barn in Pewaukee, about two miles from the village, where they found the wheel-barrow and a general assortment of dry goods, boots, shoes and leather. The whole whole amount would weigh at least 150 lbs., which he had wheeled from Mukwango, a distance of 15 miles, after 9 o'clock on Tuesday night. It seems that he was seen back in the fields near Mukwango on Tuesday several times, and when night came he loaded his "kit" and put out. He was taken before a magistrate, plead guilty to the charge, and for the want of bail was committed to jail to await his trial. He calls his name Henry Swartz, is a German by birth, and says that he resides in the 2d ward in Milwaukee.—Wf.

McCARDEL HOUSE.—This establishment is superior to anything yet produced in the west, and it is not equalled by any this side of New York city. It is hardly yet completed, but the signs of expense and convenience with which every portion of the house and its fixtures, from the basement to the garret, is characterized, plainly tells that it is being fitted up in a style regardless of expense; and that it will be kept in a style superior to what Chicago has been accustomed to have.

Col. John McCardel, the principal landlord of this palace, is from Albany, N. Y. The dining rooms, sleeping apartments, sitting rooms, private parlors, and in fact every item about the establishment, is fitted in the most sumptuous style. This hotel is designed for transient as well as permanent custom. There are 142 rooms, capable of comfortably lodging at least 200 persons; and as for eating arrangements, any number can be accommodated. The plate and table furniture are very superb.—Chicago Trib.

WASHINGTON, July 30. It is reported that Marcy on Saturday was very explicit in his declarations to his friends in congress that none of the responsibility of the instructions to Capt. Hollins rested on him. It is, however, reported with equal positiveness on the other hand, that so far from objecting to them in council, he directly approved of them. A curious fact has leaked out as to Mr. Solon Borland while at San Juan. It is asserted that he organized a military force to maintain the honor of the United States, concentrated in his person, as well as for his self-protection, and paid them about $12,000, for which he drew on the government, but the draft has not yet been paid. Probably this amount is included in the $21,000 demanded by Capt. Hollins of the citizens of San Juan.

A GRAVE JOKE.—It is said by the jokers about town—we give the story as we heard it—that a few days since, a colored gentleman, who had become pretty much of a misanthrope, was found dead—drunk. The wages of the vicinity ordered the sexton to leave a coffin for a cholera subject, and call in half an hour. When the hearse arrived, the coffin was duly lifted to its place, and a small procession moved towards the receptacle of dead humanity. When the party were about lifting the coffin from the hearse, the subject revived, and perceiving his critical position he burst the lid, and landed at one bound among the mourners, a sober man. His first impulse and his first threats were to flog the crowd, but perceiving that that would be taking a rather large contract, he compromised the matter for a ride home upon the hearse. As the cortege returned, all the women and gossips ran to their doors to ascertain why the coffin was brought back. They were all duly assured that the victim had come to life, and he was pointed out sitting on his own coffin whistling, "Oh carry me back to old Virginia." The best of the joke is, the negro has given up drinking, and worked industriously ever since. The story has gone to Cleveland, and by this time probably reported that twenty-five live men are buried daily in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

OUTRAGEOUS ABANDONMENT OF THE UNITED STATES MAIL.—We have information from undoubted authority, that the mail carriers to Utah are accustomed to throw away much of the paper mail after getting away to the Platte, and that there was a number of bags thrown away or abandoned, or thrown into a cave just above Fort Kearney, and in other places along the route. Is government paying men for destroying the mail in this way? It might be done cheaper at Independence before starting.—Council Bluffs Blade.

THE WET SEASON.—Messrs. Lano and Van Vechten, who started north a few weeks since, in pursuance of a contract with the government to survey some lands in the north-western portion of this state, returned without doing anything in consequence of the land being so much covered with water as to render it impossible to travel over it.—Waukesha Dem.

A Virginia paper states that in 20 years, 211 slaves have escaped from Wood county, valued at $181,200.

IN CIRCUIT COURT OF ROCK COUNTY.—In CHANCERY.

Clarinda C. Peck, administratrix of the estate of Philander Peck, deceased, vs. Lulu Ann Rice, James P. Rice, Emanuel Cawker, Simeon Kahn, James Norville and others.

THE subpoena issued in the above entitled case having been returned by the sheriff of Rock county not served on the above named defendants

James Norville and Samuel Kahn, and that after diligent search they cannot find the said defendants in this county, and it having been made satisfactorily to appear that the said defendants are not to be found in the State of Wisconsin, and no appearance having been entered by or on behalf of said defendants, therefore, on motion of Prosper Grava, solicitor for the complainant, ordered that the said defendants appear and plead, and that if they fail to do so, judgment shall be rendered against them on or before the 29th day of September next, or that in default thereof the said bill of complaint be taken as confessed against them. And it is further ordered that within twenty days from the date of this order the complainant do file with the court a copy of the same to be filed on the said defendants, James Norville and Samuel Kahn, or that she cause a copy of the same to be published in the Janeville Gazette, a public newspaper printed and published in the city of Janeville, at least once in each week, for three successive weeks.

Dated June 21st, 1854.
